hot or cold, without leaking elsewhere in the nou your water supply is good. If you can flip a lever pull a plug, and everything runs off the premism without leaving any trails, you have no sewer profilems.

We all get somewhat attached to our homes. Be reportedly, the average American moves at least cery five years, so how attached can you get? It's hat to leave friends in the old neighborhoc are the memories of five Christmases, a bir or two, that will be less vivid in other some other than that, we just move on, hopefully up, wit out many tears.

But some of us have landed in Wasatch Count where the there's a standing joke that has somethin to do with it being okay to miss with a guy's wife, b not his water, and where everybody has to be caref about what they do with their sewage to avoid tairing that precious water.

It's even more awakening to live here five or to years and count up all the people we have met whare direct descendents of the original settlers in the County and often live on the same ground, may teven in the same houses, as their forebears. It's new experience for us who are city-bred, to sit with randomly gathered group of locals and listen to the talk about having the same teachers, playing on the same high school ball teams, then about how the grandparents and great great grandparents share experiences in the same way. Most of us have changed states, many times, and couldn't tell you can the tops of our heads what cities our great great grandparents lived in.

And never before moving into Wasatch Coun have we ever personally known a man to weep because he lost some ground. Most city dwellers whose their land to progress, like highways, mall parking lots, only want a fair price, take their mone and set up housekeeping or business someplacelse, with few, if any, regrets.

Now many people in Wasatch County are losing their property to Jordanalle — to "progress." Other who are being allowed to keep their land are finding their property rights compromised. And the was supply to those lands is in question. Maybe it has be so, to provide the most good for the most people although that point can be argued. But it is being done in such a heartless manner! Guv'ment people are just saying we'll take this, and this, and a little that, so the water will continue to flow out of the tay in the city condos, so the trucks can keep moving, those "hardworking" desk sitters can dance the handmade flies at the end of a string on a beautif stream.

Although some are still fighting construction of II Jordanelle Dam, the odds are against their winnin Besides, the ground has already been taken at desecrated. But it was yanked, when it should have been gently eased away. Big city, guv'ment official show no compassion for the victims, for those families who are losing lands that are cherished families who are losing lands that are cherished families who are just stretches of dirt and foliage that the owners should be glad to get the going water that is wanted by more important.

Our only point is this: Those of us who are live here long enough to learn about the real worl

where long enough to learn about the real work where water is precious and appreciated, and lat represents heritage and the toil of generations, fe very deeply for those who are coldly being show aside in the name of progress, even though we had no personal experiences that would allow us to tru identify with such losses. That's not worth much, b
